The Pledge and patriotism in the classroom

Teachers have many options

By JIM GRODNIK

ALBANY — The Pledge of Allegiance, once as much a part of the school day as homeroom and recess, is now recited only sporadically in Albany schools.

That doesn't mean school officials and teachers are any less patriotic than they once were. According to John Marlowe, principal of Albany High School, a solid academic curriculum and classroom discussion of public issues are what develop good citizenship, not the Pledge.

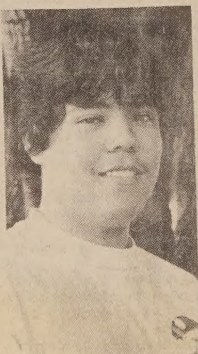

"We're looking at the substance of patriotism, rather than the shadow," he said.

A state law, passed in 1961, amended the Education Code to require "daily appropriate patriotic exercises" in the public schools. Although recitation of the Pledge of Allegiance satisfies the requirement, a number of other options are open to teachers.

Marlowe said when the Pledge is spoken mechanically and without thought, it creates disrespect, rather than patriotism. "It becomes a meaningless ritual, a boring, inactive rote process."

Instead, he said, Albany High stresses classroom discussion of current events. Students are encouraged to bring in newspaper articles. Marlowe also pointed out that each year the school sends students to Washington, D.C. to visit Congress.

Kaz Mori, assistant principal, said, "The problem with controversy over the Pledge is that bigger issues get put out of the way by this emotional issue." He said students' understanding of world problems and the task of improving the schools are higher on his list of priorities than discussion of the flag.

Patriotism and its trappings have been in the news recently. In December, the Berkeley City Council refused to reinstate a policy of preceding its meetings with the Pledge. In addition, in violation of the state Education Code, a number of Berkeley schools were not flying the flag.

Also in December, acting on an inquiry by parent, Albany Superintendent of Schools Stephen A. Goldstone conducted a survey of the district to check compliance with the state rule requiring patriotic observance.

He found a variety of patriotic exercises. Some classrooms have a daily, morning flag-raising ceremony; in others, the Pledge is regularly recited. Some teachers substitute class discussion for a formal ceremony.

Goldstone said that despite the controversy in neighboring Berkeley, only one parent has inquired about the district's policy on patriotism.

What Albany students think

By JIM GRODNIK

ALBANY — At lunchtime last week, students at Albany High School discussed the Pledge of Allegiance and patriotic activities in class.

Robin Gavin, a 16-year-old Albany sophomore, last said the Pledge in the fourth grade. She was able to recite it correctly, with a few long pauses for thought. "It shows honor and respect to the people that have died in wars, people killed a long time ago," she said.

"In class, we read history, and we talk about the British War, the French War and the Cold War."

Marianne Lysmer, a 15-year-old freshman, recited the Pledge flawlessly and with emphasis.

"I love America. I think we should (recite the Pledge). I wouldn't mind doing it," she said.

"In class, we bring in newspapers and we talk about anything we want to — Beirut, the war, the Russians, anything."

Denton Sudweeks, 17, said he last recited the Pledge of Allegiance when he was in the fifth grade in Walnut Creek. He didn't even attempt it now. He said, "I seriously doubt if I could say it. A lot has happened since then. It tells your values and how much you love your country. I don't think it hurts you."

Class discussion? "We talked about whose fault it was when the Russian airliner was shot down."

Vic Sundseth, a 16-year-old sophomore said, "I don't feel like saying the pledge every morning. But I love apple pie and hot dogs."

The Albany Library needs room to grow

School race no contest; city may cancel election

By FRANCES THOMAS

ALBANY — City officials may cancel this year's uncontested school board race, a move that would save thousands of dollars in elections costs, but could abridge voters' rights.

The Albany School Board has asked the Alameda County Counsel, its legal representative, whether it should drop the apparently pro forma race from the April municipal ballot.

But City Attorney Robert Zweben and Janice Kotter, the Alameda County registrar of voters, already have said the state election code allows the cancellation.

Board members Robert Nehls and Gerald Brunetti are running unopposed for reelection. If the election is dropped, whether Nehls and Brunetti would be appointed or elected members remains to be resolved.

Stephen Goldstone, superintendent of the Albany Unified School District, said the district could save about $6,000, its proportional share of the total cost of the election, which in the past has cost about $15,000.

Nehls, who supports the cancellation, asked, "Is it really necessary to have an election, when no one is running against us?"

He answered himself, saying it seemed "ludicrous."

Kotter said the election code gives the City Council three options if a vacant seat is not contested. The council could decide to hold the election anyway, appoint the candidates who have filed nomination papers, or appoint any eligible person if no one has been nominated.

Brunetti said he favored saving the school district money, but said, "on the other hand citizens should know whose names are on the ballot and have the chance to write in (candidates)."

Council member Henry Kruse, Jr. had a similar viewpoint.

"I tend to favor saving money, but depriving voters of the opportunity to write-in is a worrisome thing."

But Mayor Ruth Ganong said she could not recall a

Library site use debated

By FRANCES THOMAS

ALBANY — The library site could one day become a combination library, retail and office complex, raising money for the school district and expanding the library's space.

Combining public use and private business was one proposal discussed last week at a joint City Council and School Board meeting on the future of the library. The council and school board members also discussed moving the library to another location and commercially developing the centrally located Solano Avenue property.

The library is operated by the Alameda County Library System in a building owned by the city on land owned by the school district. Any decision would require the support of the three parties.

The city officials did not settle on one proposal, but appointed a committee to survey publicly owned city property and study ways to expand the library.

Stephen Goldstone, the superintendent of the Albany Unified School District, said developing the property would give the district a much-needed source of money not tied to state allocations. He said 80 percent of the district's $7 million budget came from the state.

But he said he "could not even 'guesstimate' how much revenue" a commercial development would add to the district's coffers.

After the meeting Gerald Brunetti, a school board member, said, "Ideally, we would like to develop the site to bring in revenue and provide additional space for the library. But I don't know if it is going to work."

The city's parking requirements are a major obstacle to development, Robert Guletz, the director of the public works department, said. A new development must provide off-street parking. But the library site is too small to accommodate the parking spaces a shop, restaurant or offices would need, Guletz said.

A three-story building, for example, with shops on the first floor, the library on the second and offices on the third would need 40 parking spaces. But at most only about 33 spaces would fit on the site, Guletz said.

Jennie Cooper, head of the county library system, said the library system was willing to discuss any proposal that would expand the library's space, but wanted the library to remain on Solano Avenue.

"The space is crucial," she said. "Locating a library is like locating a business or a bank, the location is the key."

The library is within walking distance of many residents and is located in at a busy intersection near the post

E.C. Co-op may close March 15

By PETER ALLEN

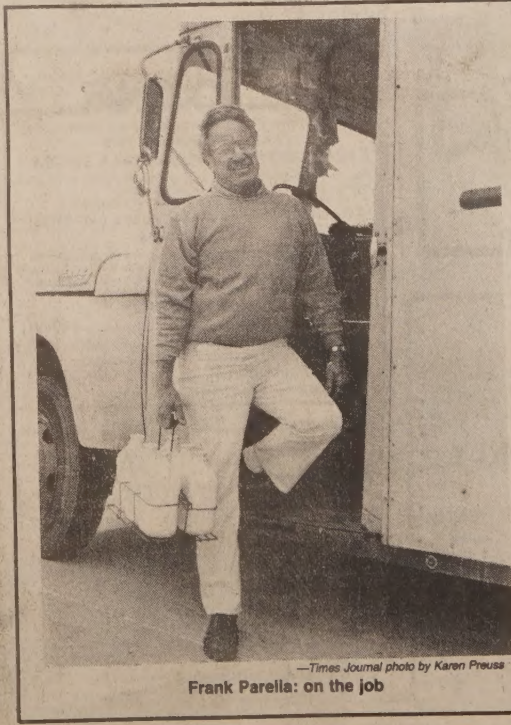

The directors of the Consumer Cooperatives of Berkeley sped things up Monday night for the El Cerrito Co-op, putting it up for sale immediately and leaving open the possibility that it could close by March 15.

"I think (the board) makes more specific the March 15th date as the actual day the store might close," said Chris Christian, one of the leaders in the drive to keep the Eastshore Boulevard store open.

"It lets us proceed with our plans but on the other hand the spirit of (our) original proposal didn't view March 15 as that firmly a cutoff date for closing the store."

At the end of January the Co-op board decided keep

Frank Parella: on the job

Milkman has been in business 50 years

By JIM GRODNIK

EL CERRITO — Fifty years ago, Frank Parella was milking the family cow in the pastures of El Cerrito; today he's still in the milk business.

Parella is an old-fashioned, honest-to-goodness milkman, delivering milk, butter and eggs to the doorsteps of his customers, some of whom he's been serving for 40 years.

"Now I'm the only game in town," said Parella, who has seen his profession slowly sliding toward extinction, along with his stock in trade, the glass milk bottle. Ninety percent of his customers prefer their milk in the glass bottles.

A milk route was once a treasured commodity in the El Cerrito area, worth up to $25,000.

"I don't know if it would be worth anything now," said Parella. He and Pete Tonelli, who also delivers products from Royal Jersey Dairy in El

Bringing the milk home

Sobrante, are the last of the independent.

It's an old-fashioned trade that hasn't been computerized, franchised or malled.

In his white van, cooled to near-freezing temperatures, Parella delivers to Richmond, Albany, Kensington and El Cerrito on Tuesdays and Fridays. He hits Pinole, Tara Hills and El Sobrante on Mondays and Thursdays. On Wednesdays, it's Point Richmond.

Using a well worn log book that he's had since 1948 — "they don't make them like this anymore" — Parella keeps records of more than 325 customers. Fastened to the metal rings of the binder are the front door keys to 50 houses.

In a world of increasing distrust, Parella stands alone. When his customers are away, he brings the milk inside, checks the refrigerator and leaves whatever he thinks is needed.

Word of his reliability and honesty has been passed around.

"I have people that start cold and don't know me from Adam, but they give me the key and tell me to put the milk in the refrigerator," he said.

Along his route, he has the children and grandchildren of some of his original customers. He started delivering the milk from the family-owned Parella's Dairy in El Cerrito during the depression. They owned eight cows that grazed in back of their Richmond Avenue home. Parella's mother, now 92, still lives in that house.

When the dairy closed in 1947, Parella drove a Borden's truck for two years, and then went into business for himself. At first, he called his enterprise the Cerrito Home Dairy; after he moved to Pinole it became Frank's Home Dairy.

Parella and his wife, Joanne, have raised four boys and three girls in their house in Pinole.

"The financial rewards aren't all that great. No milkman ever got rich," he said. But he loves his work, particularly the day-to-day contact with people.

"I gab for a couple minutes, and here and there I have a cup of coffee," he said. What he doesn't enjoy is carrying a load up a flight of steps.

When making his deliveries, Parella sometimes feeds the family dog, cat or parakeet, and he also brings in newspapers and mail for people on vacation.

Parella once entered a house to find a heater on fire. He turned it off and, "because I opened all the windows and doors, the insurance company had to repaint the whole house and replace the carpets and drapes. The lady who lived there gave me a big kiss."

Parella's best route is through Pinole, El Sobrante and Terra Hills, where the families are larger, and use more milk. He's seen a decline in volume in El Cerrito and Kensington. "They are getting to be adult areas. A lot of kids have left and milk consumption has dropped," he said.

His top customer buys $80-$90 worth of dairy products a month, and orders 16 half-gallons of milk a week. The average customer has a monthly bill of around $25.

Parella's own family was once a major consumer. His seven offspring, who now range in age from 17-30, went through two gallons of milk a day when they were small.

"They'd tell their friends, have a glass, it's free," he said. "That's why I almost had to stay in the milk business."

Glass bottles, which many people say make the milk taste better, are getting harder to find. Parella said the bottles that once were made by Owens Illinois Glass in San Leandro are now shipped from Philadelphia. The bottles, which are also popular with environmentalists because they can be reused, come in quart and half-gallon sizes. The Golden Jersey Dairy is the only one in California that sells milk in quart bottles.

"If they decide to discontinue glass bottles, I'd be out of luck," he said.

Parella said he's thinking about cutting back his route to two days a week. "After a rainy day, you come home soaked, tired, and cold. And those steps look a lot meaner when you get up in years," he said.

Asked to recite it, he said, "I pledge allegiance to the flag of the United States of America, one nation, under God, with liberty and justice for all," Sundseth left out "and to the Republic for which it stands."

He said, "In Phil Wainlin's class, he hands out newspaper clippings on American problems."

Sophomore Lene Riley, 16, last recited the Pledge as a freshman at Watsonville High School and she breezed through it without a hitch. "I see nothing wrong with it. Little kids do it," she said.

"You don't see much patriotism in the schools. They're here to teach us reading and writing, not patriotism." Asked about patriotic observation in the classroom, she said, "I don't see anything like that. I go to church every weekend and that makes up for it."

Vincent Lewis, 16, last recited the pledge of Allegiance at Albany Middle School. "It's pretty cool. It says what it really is," he said. His class in American problems discussed American involvement in Lebanon and the Federal budget.

LIBRARY

But Henry Kruse, Jr., a council member, said he might support moving the library if another site could be found.

"How can anything be far away in Albany, which is only one square mile?" he asked.

The library is about 3,000 square feet. Cooper said it needs to be at least twice as large to accommodate patrons, books and special services. Ideally she said it would be three times as large.

School board member Kay Rabin said the library's expansion rather than generating new revenue should be the main goal.

"(The library) is one service that stretches across all the ages in the community," she said.

School Board President Robert Nehls agreed, but suggested a joint city and board venture might be a profitable enterprise. Nehls said the Anaheim Convention Center, run by the city of Anaheim and its school district, was a successful money-maker.

"There have been no calls or indications of any stone to me or to any of the principals," he said. He is satisfied with the results of the survey and the intention of monitoring Albany classrooms. As a value of the Pledge of Allegiance, he said, "I think kids should know what they are saying."

Flags, donated by the American Legion three ago when the existing ones were showing wear and fly each school day at all the schools. There are also in each classroom.

At Marin Elementary School, principal Jon said that a majority of the classes do not say the Pledge. There, as at the other schools, classroom discussions of current events and American history has replaced the mal recitation.

Frank said the Lions Club makes an annual flag presentation to the third grade. Outside the school flag that is raised daily was a gift from Marty Bandvik, now attends Middle School. Bandvik had flag-raising two years ago as a Marin fifth-grader.

The principal of Vista Elementary School, Hughes, said his school's teachers also use a variety of exercises, including the Pledge. "Speaking as an educator and a history and government teacher for 10 years, it's appropriate to say it," he said.

At Cornell Elementary School, the Pledge of Allegiance is the patriotic activity most often observed in classroom, according to principal Linda Henderson, recently surveyed all the teachers. In some classrooms children take turns telling how they have been good.

In others, a regular ceremony is observed: one hangs up the flag each morning, and another takes it down at the end of the day.

CO-OP

The El Cerrito store open past its Feb. 4 closing date, giving it five-month extension to turn its fortunes around.

But El Cerrito's grievance came with the caveat: store members must come up with a cash-producing development proposal by March 15 and it must eventually come independent of the Berkeley stores.

Monday night's action speeds everything up, putting the food store on the market immediately and giving preference to buyers who will keep a store run "by and for" Cerrito co-op members.

Three other unprofitable stores — in North Oakland, Marin County and Walnut Creek — were closed recently to try to offset the Co-op's $3.35 million in losses over past five years.

Christian declined to comment on discussions Cerrito Co-op members have had with developers, but acknowledges that there is some interest in the property.

"There is the problem that an agreement can be reached but it will take a long time for escrow to close," said Tuesday. "What we're worried about is the closing of the store, not so much the sale of the store."

But board member Florence McDonald, who said El Cerrito store is losing $5,000 a week, said she would vote to close the store on March 15 if a sale weren't summated.

"But maybe there are five votes to close it," said.

Miller to supes: no thanks

By HAROLD KRUGER

Judy Miller and Contra Costa supervisors evaluated each other for more than two hours last Friday afternoon. Miller came away not liking what she saw.

Pegged as the savior of a county government burdened with a $9.8 million deficit, Miller politely declined to succeed outgoing Administrator Mel Wingett.

"It was the wrong time and the wrong place," said Supervisor Nancy Fadden, who wanted Miller to take the job. "She felt her career in Washington was progressing at a very rapid rate. She has a good, secure position. She has been doing an admirable job. It's our loss."

Supervisor Tom Powers, another Miller backer, was also disappointed.

"I felt she could do the job," he said. "The experience and capabilities she had and her previous long service with county government gave her all the necessary ingredients. She is a fine woman and a fine manager. She could bring us out of the immediate crisis."

"We do have some options that are available on an interim basis," Powers said. "There's the traditional recruiting process. It could be handled in-house or it could be handled by a search firm, commonly known as head hunters."

Powers noted that both Arnold Leff and Wingett were found for the county by a recruiting firm.

Bookkeeping errors in the Leff's Health Services Department led to the current fiscal crisis and Leff's sudden resignation last year.

"Search firms are as good as the people they produce," said Powers, who noted "head hunters" can charge anywhere from $10,000 to $30,000.

"I truly felt Judy had all the qualities we needed for leadership," Fadden said. "She knows how to close up the ranks. She knows the players. She had the respect of county employees and department heads. She knows the ins and outs of county government."

Fadden said the supervisors would be seeking advice from two former county administrators, Art Will and J.P. McBrien, who both still live in Martinez.

Miller currently is deputy assistant secretary of the Army. She was county Manpower director.

Jockey Mike Baze injured at GGF

ALBANY — Mike Baze, a standout rider from one of racing's most prominent families, fractured his left collarbone in a training accident Thursday morning at Golden Gate Fields.

The 24-year-old Baze was unseated when his mount, Ten Dances, tripped on a loose front wrapping at the completion of a half-mile workout. He will be sidelined for approximately a month.

Baze and his older brother Gary finished third and second, respectively, in last year's jockey standings at Longacres in Washington. Their cousin, Russell, has been the premier reinsman in Northern California the past four years.

ELECTION

time when Albany voters had ever mounted a serious write-in campaign.

"I think the people have spoken by not contesting the election," Ganong said. "We do not have a history of having substantial challenges by write-in candidates."

City officials also want to clear up any question of the status of the two school board members if there is not an election. Under the city charter, council members and school board members cannot serve more than two consecutive terms. In 1982 voters rejected an attempt to exempt the board members from this requirement.

But appointed member might not be subject to the two-term limit.

If the election is canceled, Zweben said, the current board members would be appointed by the council to elected positions.

"I don't know whether this would limit their terms," he said. "It might be an issue."

But Nehls, who like Brunetti is running for his second term, said he would remain an elected official because he had complied with the nomination requirements. Goldstone agreed with Nehls' assessment, saying the two members could not run again in four years.

Although the council will make the final decision, Zweben said it should abide by the recommendation of the school board.

Victim of assault awarded $100,000 from off-duty cop

By FRANCES THOMAS

ALBANY — The lawyer representing a man who said he was assaulted and shot at by an off-duty police officer, said his client has won a $100,000 settlement from the officer.

John D. Winer said his client, Frank Watson, Jr., an Oakland resident, who sued Albany Officer Warren Buzzard, won the settlement Oct. 27, 1983.

"I, of course, consider it a victory," Winer said. "I thought it was a good settlement for a case where there was no physical injury."

Winer said Buzzard's homeowner's insurance paid the settlement. The settlement is not an admission of guilt.

Donald Kincaid, the lawyer representing Buzzard, confirmed the suit was settled. But he said he would not discuss the amount of the settlement until he talked with Buzzard. Buzzard could not be reached for comment.

The settlement came shortly after Alameda County Superior Court Judge Whinton McKibben dismissed Watson's suit against the city. Watson claimed the city was negligent in hiring Buzzard, whom it called "violent, vicious, and untrustworthy."

But McKibben granted the city's motion for summary judgment, agreeing that the city was not liable for what an employee did while off duty.

Winer said it appeared Buzzard's insurance company was anxious to settle and did so about a month before the scheduled trial.

The suit arose out of events on the evening of July 1981. Buzzard, who is white, and Watson, who is black, got into a shouting match and then a fight after Buzzard pulled his car up alongside Watson's on an Oakland street corner and criticized Watson's driving.

Watson, complaining that Buzzard had dented his car, then followed the police officer to the parking lot of an Oakland bar. According to a deposition filed by Buzzard in 1982, who said he believed Watson had a gun, Buzzard fired four shots at Watson in the parking lot. Watson was not injured and his alleged gun was never recovered.

When asked if the incident was race-related, Winer said that fact was not established. But he added Buzzard did call Watson "racial names."

Police Chief James Simmons said he was "satisfied with the outcome" of the suit. He said no disciplinary action had been taken against Buzzard, because the city assumed no responsibility for Buzzard's actions when he was off duty.

Winer said the incident caused Watson to lose a substitute teaching job and forced him to take a leave of absence from his employer, the Boy Scouts of America.

"The psychological injury (caused by the incident) has not left him," Winer said.

Fatal truck crash

An Oregon truck driver was killed Monday when his 18-wheeler spun out of control on Interstate 80 near the Hoffman interchange and plunged over the railing 20 feet to the ground below.

According to the California Highway Patrol, driver Daniel E. Stouffer, 38, of Myrtle Creek, Ore., was killed instantly when his big rig flipped over the rail on eastbound I-80 near Buchanan Street about 10:45 a.m.

Stouffer's wife, Connie, 33, a passenger in the truck, survived the crash with minor injuries, the CHP said.

According to the Highway Patrol, Stouffer was forced to brake rapidly to avoid an accident that had occurred just past the Hoffman exit. His truck skidded on the wet pavement and crashed over the rail.

A doctor from Herrick Hospital battled to keep Stouffer alive while firefighters struggled to cut him from the wreckage of his cab. Despite their efforts he was pronounced dead on arrival at Herrick Hospital.

Arts alliance wins foundation grant

The Contra Costa Alliance for the Arts has received a $3,000 grant from the East Bay Community Foundation for use in the publicity and public relations campaign for the Old Jail Art and Culture Center, Martinez.

The Foundation, based in Oakland, supports organizations classified as charitable and tax-exempt, which improve the quality of human life and primarily serve the communities of Alameda and Contra Costa Counties. The Walnut Festival Association has also donated $3,000 to the project.

The monies will be used to promote the development of the old county jail in Martinez into an art and culture center serving Contra Costa County.

When completed, the center will provide workshops and classrooms for the fine arts, exhibition galleries and artists' studios. It will also include a theater, training in the video arts and some local origination programming.

Biofeedback is taught

Learning to use biofeedback and other relaxation techniques to manage stress and high blood pressure is the topic of a workshop sponsored by Herrick Life-Care Systems on Thursday, Feb. 16 from 6:45 to 9:45 p.m. in Room 4190 Herrick Hospital and Health Cen-

Winter concert scheduled

ALBANY — The Albany High School Orchestra will present its winter concert on Thursday, Feb. 16, at 8 p.m. in the auditorium of Marin School. The program is free and open to the public.

Two Albany High School seniors, Willy Clark and Robin Goldman, will be featured soloists. Clark, a private student of Berkeley clarinetist Jim Russell, will play the first movement of the Mozart Clarinet Quintet. He is first clarinetist in the school's orchestra and concert band. He is first tenor saxophonist in the jazz band, and drum major of the marching band.

Senior violinist Robin Goldman will perform the Vivaldi G Major Violin Concerto with the orchestra's strings. She is a pupil of Berkeley violinist Karen Seegmiller, a member of the orchestra's first violin section, and will be a featured performer in Albany High School's March production of "The Boy Friend."

The Albany High School Orchestra, under the direction of Ernest Douglas, will also play the "Scherzo" from Dvorak's Seventh Symphony and the Bach Brandenburg Concerto I, with soloists Joshua Chen and Emma Armstrong.

The Orchestra's program will follow immediately after the school's "String Night."

BART tests gritty floors

A Superior Court judge has approved a 13-month BART test of textured floor materials designed to protect the blind from falls off station platforms.

Ellen LaCroix, attorney for two blind women who suffered falls on BART and the California Council of the Blind, said she was "not very pleased" with last week's decision but said her clients are "glad something is going to happen."

LaCroix had urged Judge Winton McKibben to approve a shorter timetable suggested by the plaintiffs, but the judge chose BART's proposal. McKibben, however, ordered BART to give the court a progress report in two months.

BART plans to spend $250,000 to install two types of "edge detection material" at five stations for a six-month test. But it will take months more to obtain the materials, draft a contract for installation, choose an installer and evaluate results.

Rosenquist also estimated that it will take 10 weeks to install the material because the work will have to be done at night when BART is closed.

BART safety chief Ralph S. Weule said the test will show whether the textured strips are durable, weather-resistant and safe for all passengers, including women wearing high-heeled shoes, who might trip on them.

LaCroix argued that the test as proposed could further endanger the blind, because they depend on consistency to find their way around. If two different types of materials are used in each station and only a few stations have them at all, she said, blind people could lose their footing when searching for strips where none exist. She also said the experiment is too time-consuming, claiming the total of 13 blind people who have fallen from platforms could grow in that time.

The two materials chosen for the test were recommended by Boston University, which has just completed a study on edge detection funded by the Urban Mass Transit Administration. UMTA also gave BART a grant of $154,000 in 1978 to use for the same purpose, but BART spokesman Sy Moubert said it has not been spent yet.

Cops nab bank robbers as they flee

ALBANY — Police arrested two men suspected of robbing the Sears Savings Bank only minutes after the bank's silent alarm went off and the men, one of whom had a gun, fled.

Edward C. Garrett, 31, and Melvin Darte, 27, both of Oakland, were arrested Feb. 10 and an unknown amount of money was recovered.

The police gave this account: Garrett, carrying a revolver, entered the bank, formerly Allstate Savings and Loan at 1377 Solano Ave., about 5:45 p.m. Friday afternoon. He ordered the customers to lie on the floor and went to each bank teller demanding money.

The two men fled in a 1976 Chevrolet, which was spotted by Officer Greg Bone on Washington Avenue. Police found Garrett hiding in the back seat of the car, covering the money and the handgun.

Neither the police nor the bank would disclose how much money was stolen. But Jeff Patton, vice-president of marketing for Sears Savings Bank, said the amount was "minimal."

This is the second robbery and arrest in as many months. Police arrested Claward E. Bryson, Jr. of Oakland and charged him with the Jan. 14 robbery at World Savings and Loan on San Pablo Avenue.

Library plans series of afternoon films

ALBANY — The Albany Library has planned a series of children's programs to be held at 3 p.m., Feb. 21-24, "Presidents' Week," when the Albany public schools are closed.

On Tuesday, films for school age children have been scheduled. "Seven Wishes of Joanna Peabody" is the story of the confusion that erupts when "Aunt Thelma" magically appears on Joanna's TV set and offers her seven wishes.

In "Sam, Bangs, and Moonshine," based on the award-winning book by Evaline Ness, Thomas and Bangs, the cat, are caught in a dangerous storm because of Sam's reckless habit of pretending. Two cartoons, "Lonesome Ghosts" and "Swimming Pool" complete the program.

On Wednesday, Carol Ginsburg and Lani Hermann will present a grade school sing-along. Ginsburg currently teaches an after-school music class at Marin School, and is a member of the Ellis Island Band.

On Thursday, the library staff will be joined by Paul Rockwell of the San Lorenzo Library, who will present an afternoon of storytelling and will introduce his Pee Wee Puppets.

On Friday, a film program will feature films specially selected for preschoolers. "Patrick," "A Boy, a Dog and a Frog" and "Morris the Midget Moose" are all based on familiar children's picture books. "Mole and the Lollipop" is an original Czechoslovakian animated film and "Kum-ba: Simon's New Sound" is about the steel drum of Trinidad.

Each program will last approximately 45 minutes. For additional information, please contact Zoe Kalkanis or Elizabeth Overmyer at 526-3720.

MADD sets local talk

ALBANY — On Thursday, Feb. 16, at 7:30 p.m. in the Albany Middle School library, the Parent Educator Program of Albany will present the second evening in a series on substance abuse.

A representative from MADD, Mothers Against Drunk Driving, will speak and answer questions. For further details, contact Roslyn Tuttle at 527-1582 or 666-2739 or Anne Greenwood at 524-8183.

Church takes over free food distribution project

ALBANY — The government's free cheese and milk program has a new home in the city and is now open to all low-income people.

St. Alban's Episcopal Church on Washington Avenue has replaced the Albany Senior Center as the site for the monthly food distribution. Lani Abbott, a member of the church and the volunteer coordinator of the program, said the food is free to any resident who can meet the eligibility requirements. Formerly only elderly residents received the food.

Although Ed Meese, President Reagan's choice for attorney general, said he did not believe there were hungry Americans, Albany volunteers said there are people in this city who need the food.

"It seems like there are a lot more (poor) than the image of Albany leads you to imagine," Father Warren Debenham, the rector of St. Alban's, said.

Melinda Martin, who until last week was the head of the school district's children's center, said at least 50 low-income families, with children in the city's child-care center, would be eligible for the free food.

"There is a need to be served," said Martin, who this week began a job with the Hayward School District. "It is not a monumental need, but I cannot imagine an urban center without pockets of poverty. But in Albany they are well-hidden."

A check with the school district showed more than half of the district's students receive free or reduced-price lunches. Abbott said the statistics indicate that some of these students' families would be eligible for the food.

Abbott said in order to qualify a person must be receiving food stamps, or Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC). People who are unemployed or have other proof of low-income also are eligible.

Father Russ Moore, the associate rector of the church and a member of the senior center's board of directors, said the senior center dropped the program after new strict requirements limited the number of elderly people eligible.

"We hope we will cover a broader spectrum of people than the senior center," Moore said.

Like the senior center, the church will receive its commodities, including cheese, butter, powdered milk and honey, from the West Oakland Food Project.

Although the church's vestry has not formally endorsed the project, Debenham said the 200-member congregation seemed to support it.

Friday, Feb. 17, is the date for the first food distribution. Moore said about 1000 pounds of cheese and butter would be given away. Volunteers will deliver the food to people unable to pick it up.

For more information or to become a project volunteer, call 525-1716, weekday mornings.

E.C. gets a new city attorney

EL CERRITO — Marin County lawyer William T. Bullard Jr. has been named the city's new attorney.

In a shuffling of lawyers by the City Council, Al Bianchi was transferred from City Attorney to Special Counsel. Bullard took his place and Carol Woodward became his assistant.

The exchange will mean little difference for El Cerrito because the 41-year-old Bullard has been handling most of the city's legal affairs anyway.

Bullard has worked as an assistant city attorney in San Rafael and Santa Rosa and much of his private practice touches upon development and land use issues.

"I represent a lot of clients who have beefs with local governments," he said. He also represents homeowners associations.

Bullard graduated from the University of Colorado Law School in 1968 and passed the California bar in 1973. He also has a master's degree in journalism, taken from Northwestern University in 1965.

After a brief stint as a legal editor for Commerce Clearing House in San Francisco, Bullard began public law practice in 1973.

"Maybe I'm a dilettante at heart," he said about his affection for municipal law. "You have to know about a lot of little things...You have to be a generalist within a specialty."

Bullard said El Cerrito's legal problems are similar to those of other communities, but that its hilly terrain and closeness to other cities will create more issues of land use, soil stability and overlapping jurisdiction.

Bullard charges the city $65 an hour and said his monthly bill runs about $2,500.

Cougars suspend Rice

By JIM GRODNIK

ALBANY — Frank Rice, the Cougar basketball team's leading scorer and rebounder, has been suspended from the team for the rest of the season.

Principal John Marlowe and Vice Principal Kaz Mori both declined to comment on the suspension, which applies only to the basketball team, not to classes.

According to Coach Doug Kagawa, "His behavior on and off the court was not reflecting positively on our basketball program. This hurt Albany's chances of making the playoffs, but wins and losses are not the most important thing we're trying to teach."

Without Rice, their 6-6 center, the Cougars lost to San Leandro, Piedmont and Alameda and were eliminated from playoff contention.

Kagawa said Rice, who averaged 17 points and 12 rebounds a game, was a dominant center, "a shoo-in for all-league, but not now."

Rice, 18, said the suspension was the result of two incidents, one after a hotly-contested game against Encinal, Jan. 31; the other during an assembly the same week in which he and five others were ejected from the school's Little Theater.

The Cougars lost that game to Encinal 57-56, and Rice was infuriated by what he thought was a questionable charging call on him late in the game.

Rice said he told the referee, "That was a garbage call," and threw the ball behind him, hitting the referee on the leg. Words were exchanged, and according to teammate Cary Willson, the referee nearly hit Rice.

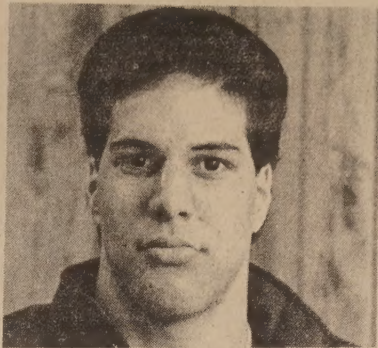

The other incident occurred at a school assembly the day following the game when Rice and five other students were ejected by teacher William Savage for laughing and talking during a speech. Following the ouster, a garbage can was thrown at the theater door.

Savage said later he was furious. "I'm six-foot five and 240 pounds, and it was all I could do to keep my hands off them. I won't take defiance of authority from anybody."

Savage said the six were giggling and interrupting the program. He did not know who had thrown the garbage can.

This is the second suspension from the team this year for Rice, who sat out three weeks in December after a hallway shouting match with French teacher Pat Moore.

Rice said he had no complaint about the fairness of the suspension, which will have no effect on next year's season, when he will be a senior.

Rice said his doctor told him he is still growing and may reach 6-8 or 6-9. With the added height he thinks he can play college ball, and he's set his sights on Iowa or UCLA after graduation. He realizes his suspension could cause problems with recruiters.

"I feel bad about it, but it's a good lesson for me. I just can't keep messing up," he said. "I'll make sure it never happens again."

He plans to lift weights to get ready for next season. "I'm just going to come out and dominate next year, and try to get the scouts to come around."

Teammate Art Collins, senior forward, said that Rice's temper is often his undoing. "He gets angry, and then he thanks me for calming him down," Collins said. "Without his temper he'd be a good guy."

Collins also said that Rice sometimes plays very poorly in practice, although never in a game.

Willson, a junior guard, said some team members were disappointed by the suspension because it ruined Cougars' chances of making the ACAL playoffs, but others think differently. "Some of the guys are glad, they think he needs to be taught a lesson," Willson said.

High school wrap-up

EL CERRITO

BOYS' BASKETBALL — On Tuesday, Feb. 7, the Gauchos held on to first place in the RBAL by cruising to victory over winless Richmond, 87-57. Derrick Williams led El Cerrito with 17 points. Robert Redditt, back from regaining academic eligibility on Jan. 27, tallied 14 and Calvin Andrews had 13, as the Gauchos improved their league record to 7-2. Tony Hollins had 11 points and Billy Gooden had 10. Al Smith led the Richmond attack with 15.

El Cerrito came out of the blocks fast and took a 21-11 first quarter lead, built the lead to 47-25 at the half, and never looked back.

On Friday, Feb. 10, the Berkeley Yellowjackets handed the Gauchos a stinging upset, 64-51. Gooden tallied 15 points to lead El Cerrito. Redditt added 13 and Williams had 7. Berkeley's Ben Campbell, who scored seven points in the first quarter, led all scorers with 19.

GIRLS' BASKETBALL — The Gauchos squad knocked off Richmond 57-50 on Tuesday, Feb. 7, to win a spot in the RBAL playoffs. Cynthia Jackson led the El Cerrito attack with 21 points, and she hauled in 15 rebounds. Freshman Lauren Strickland had 16 points and 12 rebounds. Linda Schultz had 7 points and Lisa Nakamura added six. The win raised EC's league record to 4-5.

In Richmond's losing cause, 4-9 sensation Melanie Rubin poured in 31 points with a display of jump shots from all over the court. Her scoring output was tops for the year in RBAL play, and followed her 23-point effort in the last meeting between the two teams.

The undefeated Berkeley Yellowjackets swamped El Cerrito 69-30 in the final game of the RBAL regular season. Jackson again led the Gauchos with 12 points. Strickland, seven; Schultz, five; Nakamura, four; and Jones, two, completed the scoring.

For Berkeley, Boogie Bryant scored 20 points and Kenya Jackson tallied 18.

ALBANY

GIRLS' BASKETBALL — Piedmont defeated Albany 32-15 on Feb. 7. The Cougars were led by Tara Bietz with nine points. Gina Tanuz and Monica Shaw had three each.

Against Alameda on Friday, Feb. 10, the Cougars were outclassed 54-31. Bietz again led the way with 10 points. Other scorers were Lisa Boresania, 7 and Sonya Briscoe, 8. Shaw had six points and 10 rebounds. Laurie Chelemados also pulled down 10 rebounds.

AHS matmen triumph over Gauchos threat

By CONRAD STRASHEIM

An El Cerrito threat that put six Gauchos in the eight division finals and resulted in four championships was not enough to avert another Albany title in Central Conference wrestling last Tuesday.

The Cougars' balance and strength in the weight classes held off the El Cerrito challenge to team championship of the combined RBAL-AL Tournament by 6½ points.

Albany edged El Cerrito 165-158½ after a long close competition in the San Leandro gym. The Cougars emerged with five individual championships.

Encinal was third with 116½ points and San Leandro finished fourth with 99. De Anza scored 67 and Berkeley was last in the field with 51.

The hard-earned Albany victory completed a year of Central Conference competition, with the dual trophy already stored safely away on the Albany campus. Both competitions went right down to the wire.

Albany stayed within striking distance Thursday as Cerrito mounted a lead through the 148-pound class, won with three straight victories in the 168-, 176- and 194-pound finals by Rodney Windsor, Mike McBride and Danny Crowe. Albany emerged from the day with individual champs, including Miles Orkin and Vialle.

Crowe's pin of San Leandro's 194-pound Gary Lawler stamped a Cougar-paw signature on the bottom line.

An event that started with morning weigh-ins at 6 a.m. faced off on three separate mats a little past noon, moved toward a climax with the 6:30 p.m. finals, struggling to a close shortly before 10 p.m.

El Cerrito Coach Bill Lawler said of Albany's victory, "I don't know where we could have made up the difference. I just couldn't tell you right now, except that I had more pins than we did and we lost two extremely close matches in the finals. Albany deserves it; they did a nice job this year," he added.

In the 101-pound opener, El Cerrito's Richard Lawler easily outpointed Perry Coulthouths of Albany, 9-2. Albany's Vialle decimated Berkeley's McMurry 15-10 at 122 pounds, setting up the exciting match of the day in the 129-pound final.

Coach Lawler moved back from the mat and became an anxious father, watching son Jim Lawler of Berkeley against Gauchos Reid Smith. Lawler the parent was disappointed in his son's 8-4 loss. Lawler the coach was pleased by the performance of the athlete he prepared.

"I felt bad. I wanted my son to win. But I can't let anyone I'd rather see beat him than Reid," said Lawler of his mixed emotions.

"I was kind of in awe of him at first," admitted Lawler of his opponent. "I respect the coach a lot and I know his son's good, because he trained him. It was a tough match."

Albany's Miles Orkin surprised top-seed Harry Hernandez of De Anza by resolving a 6-6 tie in the third round with a quick pin that came at 4:20.

"My shoulder wasn't down. It was a bad call, that's the breaks," said Hernandez. "Even though I think I was pinned, the guy was good and he beat me. I have no excuses. I don't know what he did but it was a move on my part."

Gauchos senior Todd Goodwin built a 7-0 lead over Encinal's Aaron Robles before pinning the Jet in 5:10 of the 108 match.

"It wasn't that easy, he made me work for it," said Goodwin, who was overweight for last year's wrestling championships and is looking forward to his first post-season advancement.

San Leandro's top seed at 115 pounds, Whitney, decided Gauchos Amer Moorhead 10-8. Whitney, the first takedown but Moorhead surged in front 42-30, regained the lead at 6-5 with a reversal, going into the third round ahead 8-7.

Whang tied the score with an escape and won with last takedown of the match.

Top-seeded Tony Silva was sidelined by a sprained ankle at 148 pounds and first-year wrestler Michael De Anza of El Cerrito won by the wide margin of 15-3 over Encinal's Jesse Mims.

Did Dool think he would become a league champion his first tourney?

"No way," he laughed. "Everybody told me I should do it, so I decided to try. It was hard and sometimes I like quitting. Oh, yeah, it's worth it now. Especially when I stand on top of that podium right there, on the top step, he said, pointing to the awards platform.

De Anza's top seed, Robert Parrish, didn't make weight at 157 and Eric Reyes of San Leandro pinned Albany's Chris Holaday in 3:08 of the final, before the straight Cougars copied titles. Rodney Windsor won 168, 11-6 over Encinal's Steve Dearborn, Mike McBride beat the Encinal 178, Jesse Tautalata, 9-4 and Cory planked Volpa at 194.

San Leandro heavyweight Alan Reneberg threw Encinal's Richard Falconer in 0:56 for the quickest fall of the tourney to cap the 1984 season.

Autism: trying to reach withdrawn children

For a therapist, it's 'an interesting journey'

By BETH MENDE

J. CERRITO — Working with autistic children is in some ways like reading a mystery story, according to Jacqueline Crawford, a therapist for the Pacific Children's Center. "You never quite know where it's going," she says, "and it's an interesting journey." The journey can also be difficult and frustrating. Crawford, a resident of El Cerrito, says the rewards make the trip well worth taking.

Nine years old, the Oakland-based Pacific Children's Center is the only facility in Alameda County to provide comprehensive, non-residential mental health services for severely disturbed children between the ages of two and 12 and their families. Funded by state and local monies, it serves its services to low-income, disadvantaged and minority families.

"I don't know that there's any honest, absolute, scientific answer to (autism)," said Crawford, 38. "Sometimes there are some neurological impairments, but it does seem that what happens in the environment has something to do with the development of this problem."

An autistic child will withdraw from his or her surroundings and get "stuck" in an early stage of development, Crawford said.

"It's a complete lack of relatedness where (a child) withdraws from interaction," she said. In some cases, withdrawal is due to parental neglect or abuse, she said.

"Children learn a lot by activity and interaction," Crawford said. "If the care-taking parent is unavailable for interaction — just by looking, smiling, cooing, tickling (the child) — then the child can't learn certain skills that enable him to develop further."

According to Crawford, autistic children may not know how to play with toys, and will sometimes be unable to speak or have eye-contact with others.

The key to working with autistic children is gaining trust, she said. "With kids, you have to deduce what they need and provide it for them, setting limits so they feel safe."

Crawford sees each of her clients once a week. During a session, she may follow a child around the room, shadowing his or her every move, while naming the things in the room or giving names to different emotions.

"I follow along with what the child tells me he needs and is ready for," she said. "If he's crawling into my lap, then I'll rock him, hold him, sing songs to him, cuddle him."

Crawford will usually meet with the child's parent or parents following the weekly session to discuss the child's progress.

When working with parents, she said, she strives to be empathetic rather than judgmental, and to help them understand their child's problems and the changes that need to be made in the home environment.

"The degree of success varies with the child and with the family's ability to also participate in the program," said Crawford. Parents who are not afraid of closeness and are willing to nurture their child can be instrumental in helping him develop, she said.

Each year, approximately 35 children are enrolled in the day-treatment program, which meets five afternoons a week. The program is coordinated by the Pacific Child and Family Counseling Center — a private practice outpatient mental health clinic — which provides counseling for parents whose children are in the day-treatment program.

According to Crawford, the earlier the diagnosis and intervention, the greater the possibility of helping an autistic child achieve a normal life. Ninety percent of the 244 children who have participated in the program over the last eight years have gone on to regular preschool, kindergarten, Headstart or special public school programs.

This success rate is higher than the one projected by the standard psychiatric guide on the subject, which estimates that only one child in six makes an adequate social adjustment, enabling him or her to engage in some kind of regular work by adulthood. Two-thirds of autistic children remain severely handicapped and unable to lead independent lives.

The Pacific Children's Center is located at 303 Van Buren Ave. in Oakland. For more information, call 465-3507.

Defining autism

According to the Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders (DSM-III) — which is compiled by the American Psychiatric Association and serves as the handbook most mental health professionals use to define and diagnose mental disorders — autism is no longer thought to be predisposed by familial interpersonal factors. Recent studies support the view that organic conditions such as maternal rubella, encephalitis and meningitis, among others, are predisposing factors in the development of autism.

Controversy continues over the relationship between autism and schizophrenia. While some mental health professionals hold that autism is the earliest form of schizophrenia, the DSM-III maintains that in families with autistic children, there is apparently no increase in the incidence of schizophrenia.

EL CERRITO

El Cerrito police reported, among others, the following crimes from Feb. 6 to Feb. 13. There were 22 adult arrests.

• A Feb. 12 brawl at a home in the 800 block of Pomona Avenue resulted in the arrest of three San Pablo brothers, formerly of El Cerrito: Albert, Richard and Joey Perez. They were arrested for burglary and assault with a deadly weapon. The brothers attacked four men who lived in the house after a fight earlier in the evening at a service station at Lincoln and San Pablo Avenues. Bail was set at $5,140 for Richard Perez, and $5,000 each for Joseph and Albert.

• The manager of Burger King restaurant on San Pablo Avenue was robbed at gunpoint while attempting to deposit $2,200 at a bank night drop. At 9800 San Pablo Ave., on Feb. 7, the robber, a man in his 20's, told the 42-year-old manager, "Give me the money, or I'll shoot."

• The same night, the 35-year-old manager of Kinney Shoe Store was robbed of $595.60 while making a night deposit at Central Bank, 1755 Eastshore Blvd. "Gimme the bag," said the robber, a man in his 20's.

• A vandal with a BB gun caused $500 in damage to windows of a home in the 7000 block of Schmidt Lane on Feb. 9.

• On Feb. 10, two men pried open windows and crawled into the Burger King restaurant, Central and San Pablo avenues. Armed with a handgun, and either a rifle or a shotgun, they told the employees in the closed restaurant, "Hit the floor." They then obtained the key to the safe, took $3,000 and herded the witnesses into a closet. The robbers were two men wearing jet curls, one in his early 20's, the other in his late 20's.

• On Feb. 10 and 11, someone ransacked the glove boxes of 4 parked cars, three in the 6400 block of Central Avenue, one in the 500 block of Liberty Street.

A total of $20 was taken.

• A hit-run driver on the 3000 block of Carlson Boulevard struck and killed Soon Hee Han, 64, as she was walking home on Feb. 8, at 7 p.m. Witnesses said the driver was at the wheel of a yellow Ford Escort, or a similar small car. After the accident, he continued on his way without speeding up.

• On Feb. 12, someone punctured the tire of an El Cerrito Police Department squad car as it was parked in the El Cerrito Plaza parking lot.

• Three men, two from San Pablo, one from Richmond, were arrested for petty theft after police found them loading eight wooden pallets into their Chevrolet station wagon behind the Safeway store on San Pablo Avenue. One told police after being apprehended on Feb. 9 with $384 worth of pallets, "I just took them for firewood."

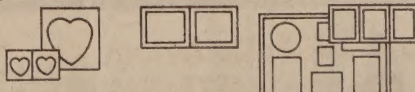

• John E. Nielsen, 25, Albemarle Street, was arrested for driving under the influence of alcohol on San Pablo Avenue. He told police, "I've only had a couple of beers."

Injured employee files claim

By JIM GRODNIK

EL CERRITO — A caseworker at El Cerrito's Open House Senior Center has filed a $35,000 claim against the city because of injuries sustained in a fall last October.

On Oct. 20, 1983, Roberta L. Johnson, 61, slipped on loose gravel on a walkway leading from the senior center to Stockton Avenue. She fell and broke her arm in two places. The arm was put in a cast, and six days later surgeons at Alta Bates Hospital in Berkeley repaired the bone.

Save our lighthouses, coast guard urges

Wayne Wheeler, president of the U.S. Lighthouse Society, will deliver his lighthouse "sound and light" show on Sunday, Feb. 26, from 2 to 4 p.m. at the International House Auditorium, UC-Berkeley campus (corner of Durant and Piedmont).

Tickets are $6 each and may be purchased at the door. Advance reservations may be made by phoning 233-2385 or by sending checks, payable to East Brother Light Station, 117 Park Place, Point Richmond, 94801.

As assistant chief with U.S. Coast Guard's Aids to Navigation Branch, Wheeler has spent nearly 20 years inspecting and directing the repair of lighthouses from Hawaii to Alaska and the Great Lakes.

As president of the U.S. Lighthouse Society, he works for the preservation and restoration of our vanishing maritime heritage. Proceeds of the lighthouse presentation will benefit ongoing restoration work at East Brothers' lighthouse.

The City Council routinely denied the claim at its Feb. 6 meeting, and referred the claim to its claims administrator for investigation. Johnson now has until April 6 to file a lawsuit against the city. Her attorney, Elaine Olson of Albany, said the suit has not yet been filed.

Johnson works at the Open House in a capacity similar to that of a social worker; she visits elderly convalecents and helps them with the problems of living at home while they recover from accidents or injuries.

She said she is making the claim against the city because she is not covered by workers' compensation and has no medical insurance.

"If I had insurance, I'd say forget it," she said. Johnson is paid an hourly wage by Federal funds administered through Contra County County's Area on Aging program.

"I just want the city to pay for my expenses," she said. "It's the last thing in my mind to make money from this."

The claim seeks compensation for $5,000 in doctor and hospital bills, $700 in lost wages, and $29,000 in "permanent disability, scarring, deformation, pain and suffering."

Johnson was unable to write or drive for several weeks after the accident. She said she still has numbness in her right hand (she is right-handed), and cannot bend the thumb and first finger.

Ron Creagh, city manager and Tom Sinclair, assistant city manager, were attending a statewide meeting of city managers and were unavailable for comment.

Year-round school plan up for board vote today

By BARBARA ERICKSON

Elementary school teachers have emerged as the strongest advocates for year-round schedules in Richmond Unified schools next fall, while parents oppose administration plans for a second alternative in the district.

An unofficial tally from five hearings at selected schools showed 69 parents were in favor of the change and 100 were opposed. Some of the schools, however, are running surveys, and early returns show no clear trend.

At a hearing, which voted for the change at the school level, came out 46 to 19 against the plan on a vote by school. At the district level, the plan was rejected by about half the families responding.

Complete returns at King School showed a slight majority for year-round, no change from the first poll. At the hearing, which voted overwhelmingly against the plan at the school level, came out "evenly split" on the issue. About one-third of the families responded.

At the district level, the plan was rejected by about half the families responding. At the school level, the plan was rejected by about half the families responding.

have been on year-round schedules in Vallejo, New York and Texas as well as on traditional plans.

"I'm for it," she said. "When they are off 15 days those children don't lose as much. They do seem to retain more."

Board member Katherine Lord, who has been the strongest advocate of the new system, said last week, "My sense is that there is a growing interest." At the beginning of each hearing, she said, there is always "curiosity, interest and some hostility," but later parents have a better understanding and show more support.

"I think people generally like the idea," she said, even though it is a break from tradition.

Board member Eddis Harrison said the hearings showed "not that much interest in it." But she is willing to vote for one or two year-round schools next year.

"I still think we need to do it," she said. "It's a valuable way to go."

Board president Lau is more skeptical even though he has found some interest in the plan. He is afraid large groups of parents will stay away from the year-round schools, leaving them half-empty.

"I don't know if we were able to sell it," he said, adding that he does not know how he will vote Wednesday.

Meanwhile, district administrators are visiting year-round schools in other areas. David Taylor, assistant to the superintendent, and Steve Cederborg, head of special education, toured schools in San Diego and Chula Vista this week.

Debbie LaSalle, head of elementary education, said she heard good things from administrators when she went to a year-round school in Oakland.

"The principal felt teacher burnout was reduced," she said, "teachers were better organized and had time to re-evaluate curriculum. They also felt children learned more" because the teachers took advantage of the breaks to give extra work.

Dennett at Lake School said, "I can see where it would eliminate a lot of teacher burnout that we get from April on."

Everyone will be watching the big vote this week, she said.

"I'm quite anxious waiting for Wednesday to come," Dennett said, "because we're all sitting on pins and needles."

Getting stuffed

No, Mike Harbarth didn't catch this fish on Key Route Boulevard. The one that didn't get away was caught at the Berkeley pier by Harbarth, an Albany High School student. He had his trophy stuffed, and then brought it to school, where its (and his) picture was taken for the school yearbook.

'Sex-letter' writer is back in jail

JOHN ADAMS
EL CERRITO — A 27-year-old El Cerrito sex prole is back in jail after writing a letter to a young woman, according to police.

Ronald Fields got from pen pal listings in Girl Scout magazines. Bell said Fields, who was convicted of child molestation in October 1981, would strike up correspondence with the girls, posing himself as another young girl.

The letters would begin reasonably enough, said Bell, but eventually would deteriorate to a sexual nature.

El Cerrito police were notified of the scam by U.S. Postal officials who got complaints from several sources, including an outraged mother in New Mexico, Bell said.

Police, using a probation department search warrant, descended on Field's home at 1520 Elm St.

Detectives Michael Capuano and Ronald Boak served the warrant, arrested Fields and confiscated a large quantity of items, including life-sized stuffed dolls dressed as women.

Bell said the suspect apparently often dressed as a girl.

The violation of the terms of his parole as a child molester and the fact he is a registered sex offender make it likely he can be sent to Atascadero without further charges being filed with the court, said Capuano.

For goodness sake! Zahler makes an ace

WASHINGTON — Wally Zahler, retired maritime manager from Kensington, made the first hole-in-one in his life with an eight-iron on the 120 yard Tilden Golf Club's third hole Feb. 5.

Zahler, a 26-handicapper, is retired after more than 20 years with a steamship company and an export-import firm. He walks the hilly Tilden course several times a week.

Playing with Zahler were Ken Danielson, El Cerrito, Delanceaux, Walnut Creek, and Jim Stewart, II, Menlo Park.

The ace came in the 36-hole Irene McGowan Tournament. Among those winning pro-shop certificates were Zahler, El Cerrito, 142; Stan Bovich, Albany, 143; and Tompson, El Cerrito, 143.

A musical Falstaff, the knave who loved women

By JUDY POLUMBAUM

18 vocalists, an orchestra, a chorus, a stark Elizabethan setting, a rich blend of English folk melodies, and the words of William Shakespeare. The result: the newest production of the Commedia dell'Opera, Ralph Vaughan Williams' "Sir John in Love," was weekend.

"Sir John" based on Shakespeare's "The Merry Wives of Windsor," features one of the bard's most beloved characters, the corpulent, knavish and foolhardy Sir Falstaff.

In this story, Falstaff fancies himself in love — with two women. His overtures earn him little more than a ride in a laundry basket and an attack by the ladies.

Richard Goodman as Falstaff and Marcia Gronewald as Mistress Quickly.

is typical of Shakespeare's comedies, everything well and adversaries wind up friends. Over the past five years, Commedia dell'Opera has been a local opera fan's light-hearted fare — ranging from "A Midsummer Night's Dream" to "The Barber of Seville" and "The Magic Flute" — featuring high-caliber talent and low-priced tickets.

"Sir John" is the company's tenth and most ambitious production. It is very difficult to mount," said company director Richard Goodman of Kensington, who plays Falstaff with a stuffed-down front of ballooning velvet.

"It has 18 principals. Nobody has an overbearing role. Fourteen are men; it's not easy to find 14 competent men who can sing."

The staging and score also are complex, according to stage director Anne McNaughton, an experienced Shakespearean director. "It's a real challenge," she said.

In addition to the main actors, the production employs an orchestra of 32 members conducted by Scott Merrick, the Berkeley Chorus Pro Musica, four student ballerinas from the Berkeley Conservatory and sets, costumes, props and technical expertise borrowed from the Berkeley Shakespeare Festival.

Although few members of the cast are full-time professional musicians, all are "serious students of music," in Goodman's words.

Goodman, a baritone, works offstage as a professor of engineering at UC-Berkeley.

This is the Bay Area's first presentation of "Sir John" in more than 25 years; it was last staged at San Francisco State in 1958.

Goodman believes the opera is well worth the wait. "I've never been so thrilled with an opera," he said. "It makes your hair stand on end, it's so beautiful."

Its main attraction is "the sheer beauty of the music," he said. "Greensleeves," of course, is the best known in the work. Vaughan Williams' setting is internationally famous.

Other highlights include a duet between the young lovers Fenton and Anne in Act One, a love sonnet sung by Falstaff, and the comic antics of Dr. Caius, played by Ross Halper.

Goodman said Commedia dell'Opera's past productions have not always packed the house, but he predicted that this combination of a 20th-century composer and a 16th-century playwright would be a hit.

"Vaughan Williams' music is not wild contemporary music; it's hummable music," he said. The words are exactly out of Shakespeare, although the opera is about half the length of the play.

"I wish this opera could have a run of 100 performances," said Goodman. "Unfortunately, we're only doing six."

The performances are Feb. 17, 18, 24 and 25 at 8 p.m. and Feb. 19 and 26 at 2 p.m. in the King Jr. High School Theater, 1781 Rose St., Berkeley. Tickets, which cost $4-7.50, are available from Citicorp Savings in Berkeley or by calling 524-5256.

Cast of 'Sir John in Love' includes (l.-r.) Gretchen Geiser, Vicki Shagholian, Marcia Gronewald.

Candidate comments

Dear Editor:
Regarding your Feb. 8 article on the upcoming City election, I would like to comment on certain statements which were attributed to me as a candidate.

The main challenge facing Albany is to retain our small-town flavor while resolving its modern urban problems.

Albany is special because our community, our neighborhood and stay involved. It is this tradition which needs to be preserved.

Albany is a wonderful place to live and raise a family. The quality of our city's services (educational system, safety, etc.) is known throughout the Bay Area.

Our problems can and will be solved by careful analysis and hard work. For example, the projected million dollar shortfall in our pension plan was studied in by the Pension Advisory Committee.

The Report Subcommittee, which I chaired, produced a 162 page analysis of the problem, its causes and recommended resolutions. The causes of the shortfall as reported by our pension report, are multiple and include:

adverse court decisions; unpredictable inflation; underfunding for the levels of benefits offered; absence of professional investment management; lack of foresight on the part of certain individuals who were involved in city government in the past. (These individuals resisted advice to bring in professional investment management and turned a deaf ear to the early requests for change from the retirees.)

Albany's opportunities include developing our waterfront for public use (I currently serve on the waterfront committee) and continuing our commitment to excellence in our school system and our city services.

Our challenges include ensuring fiscal soundness and keeping up the pension plan.

I am a candidate for City Council because I feel I can do a good job for Albany.

Sincerely,
Robert Cheasty
Albany

Let's keep it clean

Dear Albany Citizens:
Cleanliness is living in a litter-free community! So, let's not drop litter on our sidewalks, streets or lawns. Albany already gets dirty enough from motorists who throw debris from their cars, without us adding to the mess. At the present time the city just can't afford to run a regular basis.

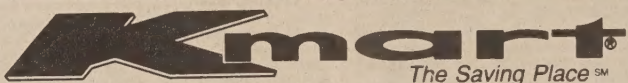

If you can see, it's up to us to pitch-in and do our part. We want clean streets and sidewalks. If I may, I'd like to ask a special favor of you? Please don't drop litter in front of City Hall, in front of the Public Library or in front of the YMCA; those places are dear to me.

I have an idea that makes it easy to keep from scattering litter; I just keep the litter in a bag or in my pockets and throw it into a trash receptacle. The idea works, try it.

Let's keep Albany litter-free; let's obey the law and keep our litterbugs. Thanks.

Sincerely,
Dario Meniketti
Albany

P.S. To cigarette and cigar smokers: Please drop butts in the gutter.

Kensington symphony plays local composer

Philip Santos

KENSINGTON — The Kensington Symphony, directed by Robert Kissel, will feature two native Bay Area musicians on Sunday, Feb. 19, at 7 p.m. at the First Unitarian Church, 1 Lawson Road.

Philip Santos, a member of the San Francisco Symphony, will perform Beethoven's Violin Concerto and the Kensington Symphony will premier "Opus 11, Six Medieval Fragments for Orchestra" by Richard Burdick, winner of the 1984 New Composition Competition. Mozart's Overture to Don Giovanni and Brahms' Symphony No. 4 are included in the program.

Santos, born and raised in Oakland, began studying violin at age 10. Five years later, he joined the Berkeley Promenade Orchestra and at 18 became the youngest member of the Oakland Symphony.

Santos has appeared as concert master and soloist with the Oakland opera and ballet orchestras, Berkeley Symphony and Trinity Chamber Orchestra. He is currently in his second season with the San Francisco Symphony.

Burdick was born in Berkeley on April 27, 1961 and grew up in El Cerrito. The son of two church organists, his musical influences are derived, in part, from church as well as modern orchestra music.

Individual concert tickets at $4 each ($2 for students, disabled persons and senior citizens) are available at the door.
